

2021 Hall of Fame Inductee: Clark BreDahl

Clark BreDahl is a commercial and purebred sheep producer whose experience with the Finnsheep breed goes back over 40 years. He purchased his first Finn ram from the U.S. Meat Animal Research Center at Clay Center, Nebraska in 1978 and has used the breed on his family's SW Iowa farm continuously ever since.

He is a past president of the Iowa Sheep Producers Association, the Cornbelt Lamb Marketing Association and the Finnsheep Breeders Association and has authored a monthly column, Dispatch from Mormon Trail Farm, for The Shepherd magazine for over three decades.

He was the first Finnsheep breeder to enroll in the National Sheep Improvement Program (NSIP) and is a firm believer in using data driven numbers for making flock improvement decisions.

Clark and his wife Linda are the proud parents of two married daughters whose families are both involved in sheep production on Iowa farms.
